Eighth Graders to Get Tuberculin Skin Tests

About 2,000 eighth grade students in 32 Torrance schools will receive tuberculin skin tests beginning April 6.

The schedule for testing at individual schools is:

- April 6, Walteria, Riviera, Seaside, Sepulveda, and Flavian schools.
- April 7, Parkway, Newton, Calle Mayor, Anza, Fern-Greenwood.
- April 13, Hillside, Adams, Wood, Madrona.
- April 20, Victor, Towers, Magruder, Steele.
- April 21, Edison, Yukon, Perry, Madison.
- April 27, Crenshaw, Hamilton, Casimir, Lincoln and Carr.
- May 4, Meadow Park, Jefferson, Hickory, Torrance Elementary, Arlington.

SPONSORED ON a county-wide basis by the Interagency Council for Tuberculosis Control, Dr. Arnold L. Freed, chairman of the council's committee on determination of tubercularization levels, said the program has as its objective the determination of the level of tuberculin reaction among eighth graders.

He added that findings will help measure progress in achieving tuberculosis control goals of reducing the present approximate 4.5 per cent level of infection to one per cent of 14-year-olds who react positively to tuberculin by 1970.

DR. FREED SAID the simple tuberculin test involves putting a small drop of harmless liquid under the first layer of skin on the child's arm. A follow-up reading of the test is made a few days later and if there is significant redness or swelling, a person is assumed to have a "positive" reaction. A positive reaction, he added, does not mean that an individual has tuberculosis but it does show that at some time the person has come in contact with someone who has active disease.

He concluded that the test is painless and urged all parents of eighth grade students in the area to complete the special parent consent forms and return them to the school. This project is endorsed by the Los Angeles County Trustees Assn., district PTA councils, health departments and tuberculosis and health associations.

... Auditorium

Revenue bonds, which would require the auditorium to pay for itself through use, or general obligation bonds, which must be approved by the city's voters, have been the most popular means of financing such facilities. The leaseback system would provide private capital, but the final costs would be increased, says the report.

Ferraro suggested some combination of all the possible means of financing the auditorium would be the most desirable.

THERE IS AT present no major auditorium within the triangle described by Santa Monica, Long Beach, and Los Angeles. Currently, the largest facility in the city is the Torrance High School auditorium, which seats about 1,000 persons.

Efforts to have the city's civic center designated as a regional cultural center, reported exclusively in THE HERALD last week, would, if successful, qualify the city for federal or state aid in the construction of the facility. The council did approve a resolution requesting the regional designation at its session last Tuesday.

Area Human Relations Forum Set

The first of six discussion forums on "Making Democracy Live," sponsored by the Torrance Educational Committee on Human Relations, will begin at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Torrance Recreation Center.

The first meeting of the group will be devoted to an examination of minorities, their numbers, characteristics, and problems. Other forums in the series will discuss prejudice, housing problems, employment practices, educational opportunities, and the effect of these problems in today's world.

The series is being co-sponsored by the Los Angeles County Commission on Human Relations.

The course will meet on successive Thursdays. There is no admission charge.

'Irresponsible Attacks' on City Hurt Every Citizen, Olson Says

"Irresponsible attacks on city officials by equally irresponsible City Council candidates are hurting every citizen in this community," Council candidate H. Ted Olson charged this week at a meeting of a Riviera homeowners group.

He began by assuring everyone there that he was running strictly as an independent and in no way was aligning himself with any individual or special interest groups.

"Torrance has many good officials and many good opportunities to be a better place in which to live and work. It does not deserve more black marks against its reputation from council hopefuls trying to win a few votes by making louder, more lurid charges than the next one," Olson said.

He added that every homeowner, every businessman, and industrialist in Torrance can give at least a dozen reasons why this is an outstanding community. It is wrong to mock their pride and enthusiasm for Torrance's future by making unfounded attacks on the city.

"The District Attorney's and the Attorney General's findings hurt the city, to be sure. Remedial action has been taken. The air is clearing. Now, let's get on with building a better city for ourselves and our children," he said.

He pointed to his record as a member of the City Planning Commission as evidence of his ability to act in the best interests of Torrance residents. Olson added that his experience as personnel administrator for a major local industry and, earlier, as Assistant to the Dean of Men for an Ohio University, have given him the background and willingness to listen patiently to every side of every question . . . "assets every member of the City men in positions of leadership in our city now. Given the additional supporting voices and votes they need on the City Council, there is every reason to believe that our community can measure up to the most enthusiastic hopes, plans and dreams of its proud and spirited citizens," Olson said.

He added that his candidacy for the City Council is based on his experience and its value in helping to build a better Torrance . . . rather than a search for dirty linen in municipal closets.

Olson listed his other community activities: these including membership in the Torrance Elks; co-chairman of the Contact Club of the Torrance Chamber of Commerce; first vice president of the Torrance Kiwanis Club; Eagle Scout, and treasurer of District VI of the Personnel, Industrial Relations Managers Assn.

Council should have and nourish."

OLSON PROMISED his listeners a strong voice on the council. "My college training was in business administration, psychology, and management. Stated in simple terms, these six years of college taught me how to tell the difference between good and bad management, between a good and a bad deal. Mixing this with a number of years of practical experience leads to development of common sense and understanding, both of which are needed greatly now by this community which has been figuratively on trial in the public's mind."

Olson listed his other community activities: these including membership in the Torrance Elks; co-chairman of the Contact Club of the Torrance Chamber of Commerce; first vice president of the Torrance Kiwanis Club; Eagle Scout, and treasurer of District VI of the Personnel, Industrial Relations Managers Assn.
